The brigade was then marched six miles from Nashville on the princely plantation of Gen. Harding, now a prisoner of war at Mackinsw. This plantation hardly has a superior in the Union, consisting of 3,000 acres of meat productive soil to be found. The topography is graceful and harmonious, with running streams, permanent bridges and imprevenents, deer parks, extensive lawas, and in fact everything except Lake Michigan in the distance, to complete the perfection of the seenery.

Now we witnessed the most affecting scene of all. Until this moment to Washington. Now we witnessed the most affecting scene of all. Until this moment thandly seemed that their favorite general could leave them. But now he was going from smorg them—he had already gone. The moment that they fully realized it all those coldiers, animated by one nurversal leagues, ran after him, some weeping aloud, and shouted in the most touching and appealing manner. "Felich him back, fetch him back," and "Oh, come back to us, come back to us, come back to us, once lack to us, McClellan:" Every one who heard those touching words was moved to tears. All the officers then lassed round and shook hands with General McClellan. This was another of the many effecting scenes we had witnessed in the morning.

[Army Correspondence New York Times]
At 11 d'elock last hight came the order for remoring Gen. M. Chellan, and aubstituting Gen. Buraside in his place. The announcement this morning, of course, occasions the most intense excitement among the troops. But we here nothing of those 190,000 who were to lay down their arms. On the contrary, the new is received among the soldiers as the harbinger of victory. To see the effect, it made known the fact to a number of them collected at the depot this morning. "Tan's good news!" exclaimed one. "I am migaty glad to bear that," said another. "This war will soon be ended," to himed in a third. There was not a dissenting value among the whole number as to the propriety and necessity for such a change.

FOUNDED ON FACT.

[From Wilkes' Spirit of the Times.]

On Friday night last, at the headquarters in Virginia, the rapid strategist, who has been following Lee since the Zest of October, at the tremendous rate of just two miles and a half a day, was suddenly interrupted in his arduous operations, and required to report himself at the headquarters of his family in the centre of New Jersey. As the order was imperative, and the firm hand of Burnside had received the baton, Manlius had no time for protest; so he packed his trunk, and taking "an affectionate leave of the army," a la Back turned his back on the Biue Ridge, "as affe turned his back on the Biue Ridge, "as affe turned his back on the Biue Ridge," had for Trenton. It was a tablesu not exactly like that of the farewell of the First Napoleon at Fontainbleau, lumortalized in the galeries at Versailles, but still it is worthy of some American artist, and should not be lost to the carloon of the capitol. A LETTER FROM LAGRANGE, [Correspondence Cincinnati Ganetic.]
LERANON, Tenn. Nov. 8, 1994.

Several prisoners arrived here this afternoon from Gen. Hamilton's headquarters, some of whom were taken in a scout of this moraling. They profess to have left Holly Springs yesterday, and assure us that the rebel srmy has evacuted that point and gone to the Hatchie, fifteen miles beyond, where there is an abundant supply of water and excellent ground for defunes. Some of these are of opinion that it will not halist the Hatchie, but will fall back to Grounda, seventy-five miles from Holly Springs, and 100 miles from this point.

Gynnada is where the railroads from Memphis and from Grand Junction units and canconth, and with Moridian and the Mobile and Ohio road on the east.

Whenever we move down the Misalselppi Central Railway to attack Groada, it is highly probable that the robes will fail still further tack toward the Golf. Jackson is their last point of dependence, and when once we have that in our possessions, Vicksburg will fail withouts blow. It Genesal Butter can move up from New Orleans, and cause the fail of Port Hadon at the same time, the Misalselppi will be fully in our possession.

Between this point and HollySprings it will take some time to put the railroad in runding order. About eight miles below Grand Janetion is a treate work, nearly three fourtns of a mile in-length, that has been burned by the robels. The bridge over Wolf River has shared the same faire, and to rebuild both will require a week or two. Below Holly Springs it is probable that there will be many piaces that will need more or less labor be ore the traine can pass. It is not at present the design to put the Memphis and Charleston railroid in condition for ervice, as we are already guarding as much road as we can afford to arbord to the Memphis and Charleston railroid in condition for ervice, as we are already guarding as much road as we can afford to arbord to the firstern road.

LaGranos, Tenn, Nov., 10, 1862. Lagranes, Tenn, Nov., 10, 1882. The reconnoissance sent out day before yesterday has returned. It consisted of a very heavy force from the strains of Gens. Mc-Pierson and Hamilton, both of whom accompanied the expedition. The movement was I think, predicated upon the arrival of news the enemy's lines to the effect that Van Dorn was failing back toward Oxford, Miss.—a town of considerable importance on the Mississippi Central Railroad, about fifty mites from La Grange, and twenty-five miles rom Holly Springs. A deserter and prisoner taken within a tew days, united in the statement that Van Dorn was actually on the retreat. It had been the opition in our lines, that the rebels Van Dorn was actually on the retreat. It has been the opinion in our lines that the rebels would make a stand at Cold Water, and hearing that they had changed the tac-ics, we supposed they had done so in consequence of Gen. Bherman's advance from Memphls.

The position of Gen. Grant's army to-day is very castly narracked. The forces of Me-Puerson and Hamitton have returned and now occupy the ground they leit to a sauriday last. Phereon and Hamilton have returned and now occupy the ground they jet on Saurday last, at Lafrange and Grand Junction. Gen. Sherman's column is somewhere in the vicinity, probably between here ann Davis' Mills, which are six miles distant, As our array is now located, Hamilton's corps forms the left, McPherodi's the acceptance.

That North organ of secession, which, among all loyal men everywhere, is held to be the mos the North with a "fire in the rear" whe they should start South to fight for the cats of that concern—the one who was ordered out of Cairo on suspicion of being a spy in the loyal camp; another one, who was lately in the military prison at Alton for disloyal practices; still another, who was made to deny his treasonable inventions one yet, who has just been forced out of our lines at luks for communicating with the enemy in violation of his agreement, and for a purpose that all can guess—all these, Lodge of the Knights of the Golden Cir. dication given by the fire-in-the-rear editor at home, and every column of the Times will blaze with simulated, or perhaps real, indignation, in consequence of the indigni-ty that is effered to its policy, in the removal of its representative and chief. The public will know how to appreciate its efforts, and just how much value to put upon the professions by which they are accom-

GEN. MCCLELLAN AGAIN. As long as Gen. McClellan was at the head of the Army of the Potomac, our loydence of the country and of his soldiers in him by the publication of the facts which have been long in our possession. But now that he has been displaced to make room for a better and more earnest an, there can be no objection to saying Major-Generalship was tendered him by a too indulgent government, he frequently and unreservedly expressed the opinion that one of the most truthful and excellent gen-Gen. McCiellan's family, in which the rted by proof that not the most ardent of the McClellan worshippers could doubt. It is, in fact, notorious in Cincinused any care in concealing them from his associates, upon whose discretion he could depend. Meny of these, while wondering the revolution of opinion that impelled

The state of the s stray in each section will be a necessity that no care for the ancient liberties of the people, no exertion of economy, can overlesp. Disputes shout boundaries, about the powersion of territories, about the rendition of fagistive from labor and service, about the navigation of the Mississippi, then the extension of the Double of the South over Mexico and Central Aimerics, will be rure to arise; and the pretensions of each side must be supported by an adequate force. When the South builds an iron ship, the North must follow her example; when the South increases her army, the North must follow her example; when the South increases her army, the North must do the same; and, thus, as the result of fancied insecurity on one side, and the same in the other, there is no lumitation of the extent to which the sival arming would go. Hersefore the United Steets, the principal and only nower on the northern half of the corticent, has had no neighbors whom she zeeded to fear; hence the government and the people have been content to depend upon the latent force of a citizen soldiery, and a moderate any, be assured, is the certain method of accomplishing that which they are no deprecate so much. Present honor and future security point unerringly to a continuance of the war against treason, until the old government is once more firmly established and until the continuance of the mattern and analysis of the mattern and and until the continuance of the mattern and analysis. ared, is the certain method of accoun every inch of the national soil, and until the power of the Republic, not only to repel foreign aggression but to deal with disloyalty at home, is so demonstrated that we may go back to the security and prosperity which were our happy lot before secession had done its wicked work. That is the only course left us, and that the country must follow.

SHALL WE CONCILIATE? When so much is talked of our erring brethren and our "wayward sisters," who live South; and so much desire is expressed, that all the manifold sins of these breth ren should be regarded as only venial and trivial faults; and that these sisters should be taken to our arms again, having been guilty, it may be, of somelimprudences but nothing criminal; it would be well to consider deeply, lest we be carried away or some flood of good feeling, and do wha we shall always be sorry for. Forgivenes is a Christian grace, but it is promised only to those who repent; and the church give beolution to those alone who confess and orsake their sins. There are those also, for whom no place of repentance can be there are sinners who can never be forgiv en. The history of mankind shows us n one instance in which a government choose treely and unforced, to yield to rebellion, and compromise with traitors, however eiten it may be, that rebels have proved themselves the strongest, and treason has triumphed. To compromise, parley, or negotiate with rebellion, is proof conclusive that the governm er to crush it. All talk about the police humanity, or wisdom, of putting an end to the devastation and bloodshed of war, s scouted by all men save those who beovernment, or those who are in league with the rebels. War is doubltless a terrible scourge, and every human heart recoils from its cruelthing to see desolation, ruin and death spread through the fields and homes of our own countrymen, by our own hands; but to let any feelings of sympathy or pity stay the uplifted arm, or break the aveng-ing blow, before the traitors have forrebels are still striking at the life of the nation, were to be guilty of a most un-speakable folly, and to incur a guilt darker, it possible, than that of treason itself. There can be no doubt of this, for this rebellion is struggling to destroy the only deubt. It is, in fact, notorious in Cuscan nati, where his home was when he was called to a command, that the in Republican institutions. Hence it is that this rebellion has the warm symmetric of the general were wholly in enemies of human rights and popular gov-ernment the world over. The triumph of secession is the division and rum of the Republic. The men who are fighting for him to accept a commission when it was the Union, are fighting for the great cause the Union, are fighting for the great cause.

Gen. Pleasanton with his whole command pushed forward to this place—a little hautet

cotton States, for putting into operation there his emancipation scheme. Great efforts will naturally be made to keep this pet measure of the Aboutionists from failing to the ground, and to see that the wrath which Mr. Lincoln has bottled for the first of January, does not go late a harmless fixale of sods powder. So far hi the war the enemy's schome of service insurrection has proved a ridiculous failure. The attempt is now to put it into operation where we are least defended, to try the poison at the heart of the South.

Prediction of future disaster is not a pleasing tale to that portion of our people who are never questioning what the government does, and take for patrotions a bind and blustering trust in the nume. It is for fear of the consequences of this wretched self-conclet that we have pointed out the important results involved in the navai movements of the enemy on our coast and rivers.

shots to creep within his range, and his anda-cious rifle practice was soon exchanged for a timping gallop to the rear. As we stood watching this, a whisking shot struck true ground within a few sect of us, and bounded overhead behind, and a gray-cested horseman cantered down the road be-low and into the woods across the river. This is extrainshidg, and amounts to litte, except to feel a position. In the whole of this affair there were but two men killed on our side, though several were swanded, and the result was about the same on the robol side.

on himself, he missed his foot and fell into the water. The people on the propeller took no notice of him whatever, but proceeded down the river, and but for the assistance of the officers he must inevitably have drowned. If his statement of the circumstances connected with the jaceldent is correct, the conduct of the cofficers of the propeller is deserving of the highest censure, as only equalled in brutality by that of the canal captain, who so in humsuly refused to succor a half drowned man on his boat. We regret to say that neither the name of the propeller nor the canal boat could be seemed by the officers, from the fact of their having test before daylight.
